THE MERRY SIDE!
They call it "Beauty and the Beast," now.
The "first drink" is the Devil's introduction—remember that, boys.
Many a luckless boy is wrecked on the "coast," during this season.
"Winning his way" is not always a good motto for boys—a gambler does that.
A prayer should "go" upward—but cannot escape from the clasp of self-conceit.
He—"What is it, darling, love wouldn't you do for me?"
She—"Get drunk!" [Meditation.]
Secretary Lamar says the rumor that he will resign, since his marriage, is untrue. He's already resigned.
Many men believe that the man of the future will travel through the air. He'll probably be a client of the "aerial" company.
A kind-hearted Ohio man took his home out of the harness, and quit working him. He couldn't see him any longer.
The reports of probable war in Europe cause the American merchant to lay a good big wet blanket over his conscience.
The "front in the mill" is a terrible agent for evil. It not only wrecks, but it makes the loafer get off of the fence.
Some of our exchanges are crediting Dr. Kitcher to Pike county. It's the worst knock Dr. K. has received yet.
Halsed should not be called over his comb with the pressers. It's nothing new—they're always fighting the Devil.
The trouble with the "Democrat" "Star-Ed" Goddard, "light" when she sees the Red, White and Blue, she becomes color-blind.
"Are you saved?" asked the evangelist of the bar-keeper.
"Yes," was the reply. [He meant he was picked.]
The Democrats ought to abolish the Fourth of July. Two such occasions as that and "St. Jackson's Day" is too much in one year.
It is time the Indiana Democratic Senators struck out for the South. Good references as to county houses may be obtained of Ohio Democratic Senators.
Minister to Dying Man—"Have you a last request to make, before going?"
Dying Man—"Yes, one. Don't let them put my portrait in a patent office."
There's always a generous feeling among the two parties in Legislative bodies. Each side is willing to give the other credit for being the greatest villain.
William Burkleit, of Georgia, "wished God would paralyze him," and immediately became a helpless, speechless idiot. He was an idiot before.
The chief of police of Little Rock, Arkansas, was sent to the Penitentiary for robbery. This would be considered strange in almost any other State.
Wrestling Indians from the Democrats is like—very much like drawing the teeth of a Copperhead. There's much wriggling and hissing.
Gov. McEnery, of Louisiana, says "General Jackson left democracy as he found it." Of course he did. Even the frame of "Old Hickory" couldn't change the character of the Democratic party.
Watterson says the Civil Service Law is a stupendous job, "because it keeps out capable Democrats." That don't however, keep "capable" of getting there.
In the great battle of life, never attempt to measure your opponent's steel. Always be sure of your own—that it is good and strong.
Of course Americans would not like to see a war in Europe—but if you must fight, friends, remember we've got lots of nice provisions and good guns, under this way.
"Why don't some of our Democratic warriors talk about fighting Canada, rather than Mexico?" asked an old soldier the other day.
A man don't like to destroy the bridge that carries him over.
Lieutenant-Governor Robertson, of Indiana, was quit trying to preside over the Senate, as soon as the weather gets warmer. He will seek employment in a menagerie.
Old Dan Rice says it was a joke—the statement that he was in Cincinnati, last week. This is one of the funniest things the famous clown has said.
It is somewhat perplexing to see a Cincinnati paper championing Francis Murphy, in its editorial columns, and advertising Scholop & Scholop's "Bitter" or "that" some other firm—in the advertising columns.
"The most successful litigants employ an attorney to do their business and then hire another attorney to watch him."—Gallipolis Journal.
We kick on that uncharitable insinuation against a noble profession, just as though one lawyer would not know better than to try to watch another, with any hope of success!
A Jackson man, speaking of a new patent medicine "discovery," says the inventor "discovered how to sell whisky without paying the Revenue Tax."
A Millersburg woman had her husband's remains taken up and buried four miles farther away, because his ghost annoyed her. She evidently thinks he was ugly enough while living.
Buffalo Bill's show will probably go to Europe next summer. They are trying to get up a war, over there, and they want Bill's crowd to furnish the gore.
The Commercial-Gazette has hit upon a scheme for destroying the Gospel Temperance movement. It is trying to lure a church for Murphy, and join his fortunes.
All the Democratic cry now is "Tariff Reform." What's become of that old fellow "Democratic Reform"? Have you found you couldn't get any worse, and given it up?
The Democrats are rather hard down on Clerk Vallandigham. A man who will return stolen goods after they have been hidden away, they regard as unsavory to the role of Democratic politician.
Ohio paper, to Senator Payne—"I am attacking you. You can't afford to keep still under it."
Senator Payne—"Ah, indeed! I didn't know it."
There was nothing serious about Judge Thurman's illness at the Jackson Banquet. He snuffed the breaths of those about him—and fainted! That was all.
Chicago and New York would like to have stately monuments to Logan and Grant. If the country will build the monuments, these large-hearted cities will generously donate enough ground for them to stand on.
A Democratic paper says "even the trumpet of the angel Gabriel will not call some of the Republicans off their seats away from Washington." You mistake, friend. That's not what Gabriel is tooting for. It's the other fellows he wants out.
"When the moonlight shines in on a Georgia editor's desk, does it extend far enough into the sanctum to reveal the whereabouts of the small jug, which has become so common in Georgia of late?"—Courier Journal.
Not! When the moonlight strikes his nose, he is blinded. So is everybody else in the room.

THE MERRY SIDE!
They call it "Beauty and the Beast," now.
The "first drink" is the Devil's introduction—remember that, boys.
Many a luckless boy is wrecked on the "coast," during this season.
"Winning his way" is not always a good motto for boys—a gambler does that.
A prayer should "go" upward—but cannot escape from the clasp of self-conceit.
He—"What is it, darling, love wouldn't you do for me?"
She—"Get drunk!" [Meditation.]
Secretary Lamar says the rumor that he will resign, since his marriage, is untrue. He's already resigned.
Many men believe that the man of the future will travel through the air. He'll probably be a client of the "aerial" company.
A kind-hearted Ohio man took his home out of the harness, and quit working him. He couldn't see him any longer.
The reports of probable war in Europe cause the American merchant to lay a good big wet blanket over his conscience.
The "front in the mill" is a terrible agent for evil. It not only wrecks, but it makes the loafer get off of the fence.
Some of our exchanges are crediting Dr. Kitcher to Pike county. It's the worst knock Dr. K. has received yet.
Halsed should not be called over his comb with the pressers. It's nothing new—they're always fighting the Devil.
